31. 1997. I attended a play and then dropping a nightclub, so it was after midnight when I got into my car and moved on the radio to hear the shocking news: Princess Diana had been murdered in an oven ... www.ndtv.com

2017. In the days leading up to smartphones, it was possible to spend a night without constant news alerts and Twitter notifications. The 36-year-old princess died at 4 a.m. local time (0200 GMT) after going into cardiac arrest, doctors told a hospital press conference. The car apparently hit a concrete stand on the center divider, then bounced off the right wall. A few minutes later, the car crashed into a tunnel on the Pont de L'Alma Bridge along the Seine River, less than half a mile from the Eiffel Tower. Later it emerged that the princess had suffered massive chest injuries. On the night of August, on Monday afternoon, the French authorities announced that the Mercedes driver had a lot of time over the legal level of alcohol in his blood. Early medical reports indicated that she suffered from concussion, a broken arm and cut her thighs. French police at the scene of the accident "I am very surprised by this news. But they failed to go to her heart and Diana died of internal bleeding from major chest and lung injuries, said Dr. Bruno Riou, head of intensive care at The Hospital. Bleeding profusely in the chest area, Diana was transported to the Pitie-salpetriere in the southwest of Paris, where doctors operated and then applied cardiac massages for two hours. www.ndtv.com
