

I'm not robot!

Well hello there,
moderately attractive female.

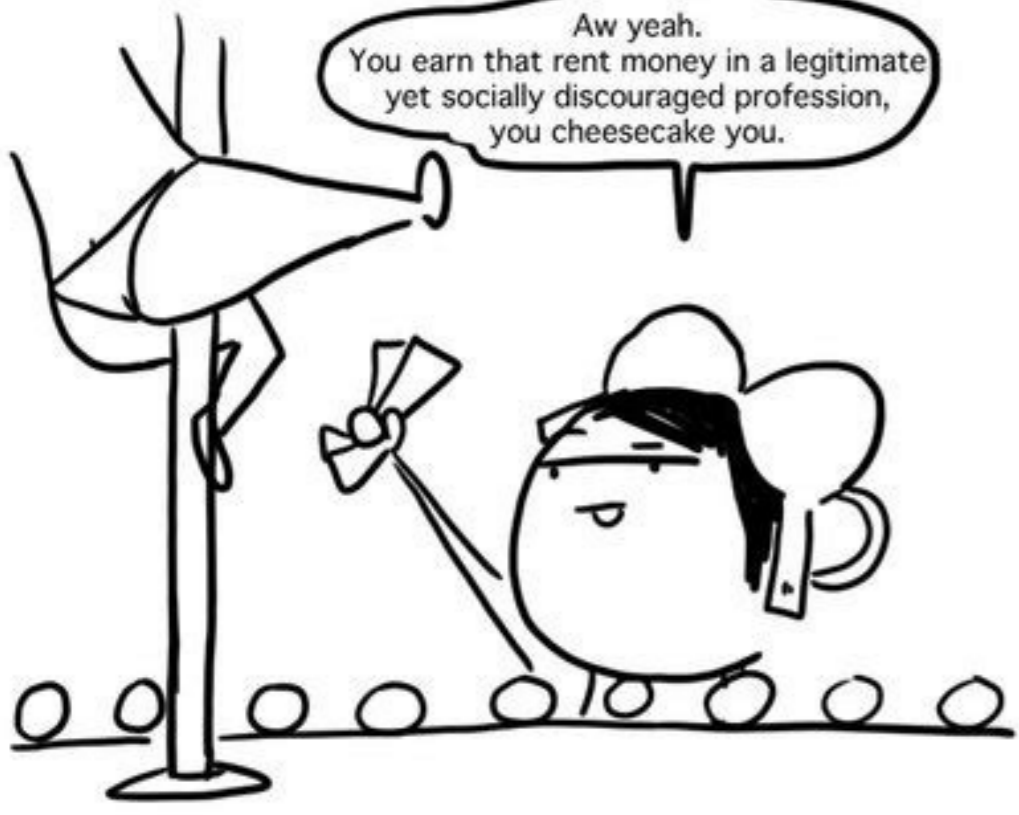

I'd sure like to take you home
and make you pancakes, if you get my drift.

How about you and me
enjoy a non-alcoholic beverage, fine lady?

Aw yeah.
You earn that rent money in a legitimate yet socially discouraged profession,
you cheesecake you.

CHAPTER 3:

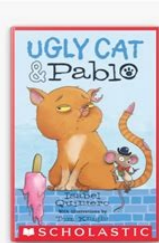

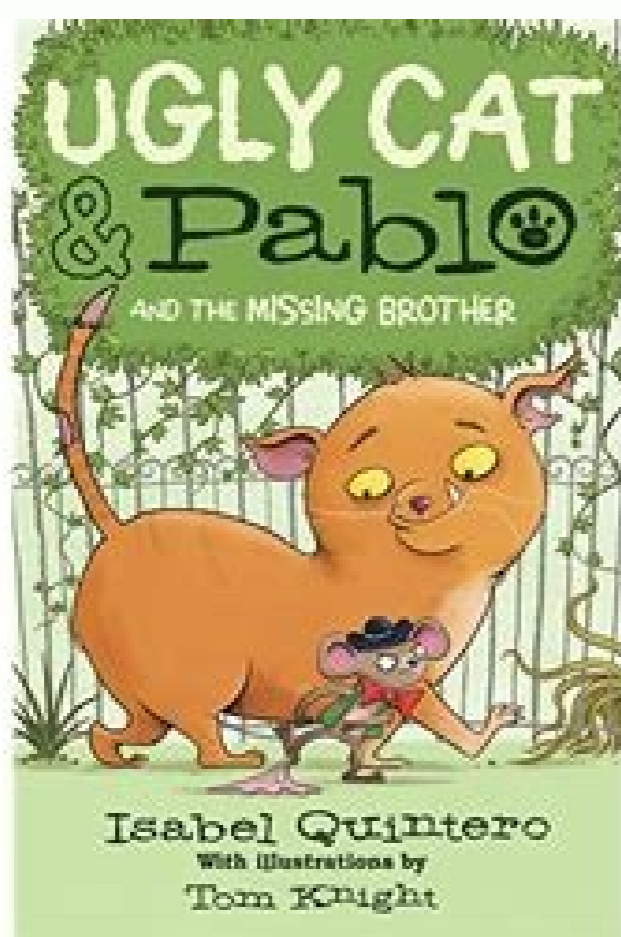

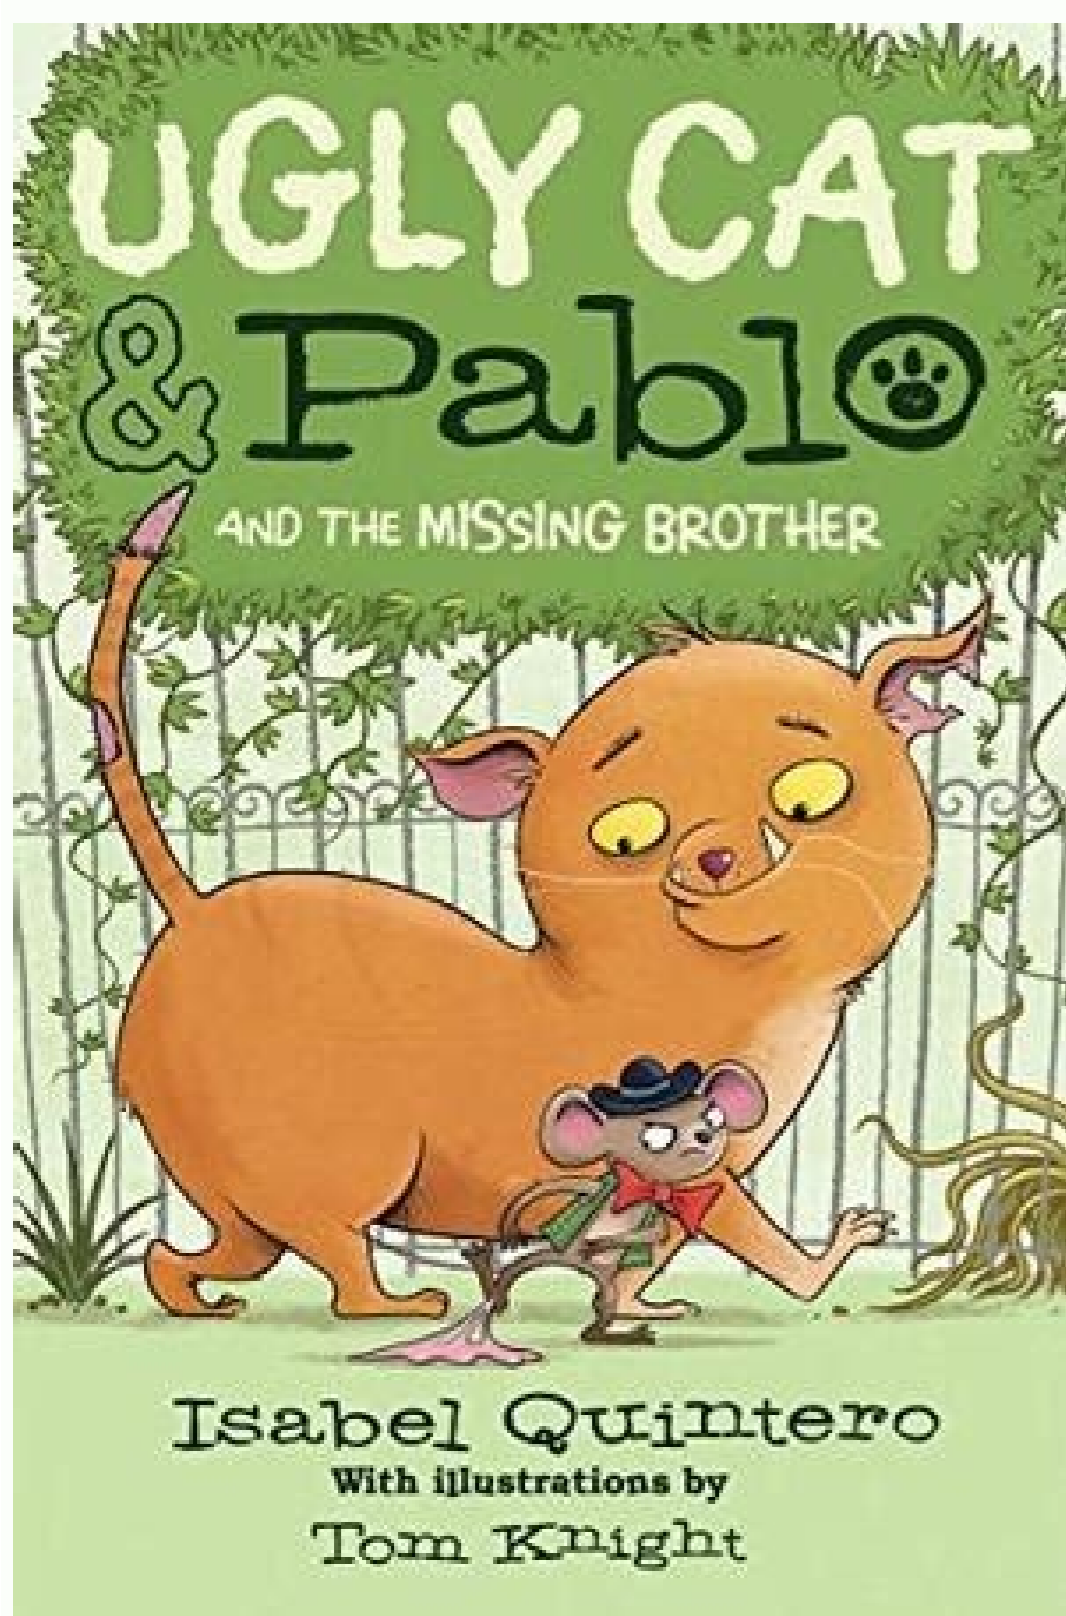

Pablo mentions little girls are afraid of mice, but Ugly Cat doesn't agree. Pablo ignores it and tells Ugly Cat that he will jump on the cart, scaring the people and scratch and hiss, even though they agreed they wouldn't do that for fear of getting kicked out of the park. Then Pablo will crawl up the little girl's leg and frighten her and get her to drop her popcorn. Ugly Cat liked the plan and forgot about how some girls aren't afraid of mice.

CHAPTER 4:

They enact the plan. The girl looked much bigger in person as Pablo got closer. Pablo jumped on her shoe and began scratching up her leg, hoping she'd drop the popcorn. She had purchased from the man with the cart instead. She picked up Pablo and decided she'd bring him home to feed him to Rocco. Ugly Cat had been watching and screamed at Pablo that he should've listened to him about girls not being afraid of mice.

CHAPTER 5:

Ugly Cat froze as Pablo was taken away by the little girl and Big Mike approached him asking what was wrong. Ugly Cat says, "Pablo please, Rocco!" Big Mike then realized Pablo was in trouble. He knew who Rocco was. He saw something was wrong with Pablo and thought he needed to help. Ugly Cat apologized to Big Mike about how he treated him horribly. Then Big Mike refreshed Ugly Cat's mind about who Rocco was, a box distributor. A few days before they saw the little girl throwing a tantrum about wanting a sock, they didn't think the parents would get her one, but they did. And she took it out for a web. Big Mike charged at the little girl with ferocity, but the girl tells him to get away and tried kicking him. Big Mike's owner heard the ruckus and scolded Big Mike and apologized to the little girl. It was left up to Ugly Cat.
